STRIKE IN FIVE WAVES

Correspondent Says Nips Hit By One Of Largest Forces To Date

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—An earthquake and hundreds of tons of American bombs rocked the Tokyo-Yokohama area of central Japan in quick succession today.

The earthquake shook northern as well as central Japan at 1:50 p. m. Tokyo time, a Japanese Domei dispatch recorded by the FCC said. Neither the intensity of the shock nor the extent of damage was indicated.

At 2:30 p. m. a Japanese supreme headquarters communicate said, 90 Superfortresses began an hour-long raid on the Tokyo-Yokohama area. "Some damage" was caused to ground installations, the communicate said.

A brief war department bulletin confirmed that Marianas-based B-29s from Maj. Gen. Curtis LeMay's 21st Bomber Command attacked what it identified only as "industrial targets" on the Japanese home island of Honshu. Tokyo lies on the south of Honshu.

Big Assault Force

(A dispatch from United Press War Correspondent Lloyd Tulp at 21st Bomber Command headquarters, Guam, said the Superfortresses comprised one of the largest forces ever to hit Japan.

(The B-29s hit targets in the Tokyo area with "good to excellent results," a spokesman said.)

Domei said the Superfortresses attacked the northern "Kanto district," embracing Tokyo and Yokohama, in five formation, but "beat a hasty retreat" in the face of "stiff opposition" from Japanese fighters.

The earthquake a little more than a half hour earlier was felt from Hokkaido, northernmost of the Japanese home islands, down through Honshu, Domei said.

The epicenter was said to be in Aomori, prefecture of northern Honshu, with Hachinohe, a few miles inland from the east coast, feeling the main weight of the earthquake.

Seven Allied Vessels Fall Prey To New Nazi Long Range Submarine

HALIFAX, Feb. 10—New long range German submarines, boldly attacking in daylight within sight of the Nova Scotia shore, have sunk seven Allied ships off that northern coast, six of them within one 22-day period, it was announced today.

The warship was the Canadian minesweeper Clayoquot, whose sinking was announced by the naval department last month. One of the merchant ships was a Canadian freighter. The others were not identified.

The period covered by the 22 days was not announced, but the Clayoquot was sunk in January.

Capt. E. H. "Bob" Robinson of Halifax went down on the bridge of his freighter as he directed abandon ship operations, survivors said. The 37-year-old master was making his second voyage aboard the first ship he had commanded.

Seventy-three lives were lost in the sinkings, it was said. Eight were naval personnel of the Clayoquot. More than 200 survivors, many of them requiring hospital treatment for wounds and exposure, have been landed at Atlantic ports.

Oh, Brother!

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—German submarines are using "new devices" in their renewed and increasing attacks on Allied shipping.

A joint Anglo-American announcement today revealed that the tempo of U-boat attacks increased during January. The attacks were renewed in December after a long lull.

The announcement, issued under authority of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill, did not describe the new devices, but said counter-measures were encouraging.

It revealed that the U-boat fleet ventured closer to off-shore shipping areas during January than previously, bearing out reports from Halifax that the submarines operated at times within sight of Nova Scotia.

The joint announcement said Allied losses during January were not substantially different from those of December.

HART UNAWARE OF POLITICS

Capital Circles Confused Whether Admiral To Be Democrat Or Republican

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—There was confusion in capital circles today about whether Admiral Thomas C. Hart will sit as a Republican or Democrat and the admiral isn't able to clear it up yet.

Hart, designated by Gov. Raymond C. Baldwin of Connecticut to fill the unexpected term of the late Sen. Francis Maitland, a Democrat, says he can't talk about it as long as he is still in uniform.

Best guesses are, however, that he will sit as a Republican because he received the appointment from a Republican governor.

Hart was closeted for a while late yesterday with Leslie L. Biddle, secretary of the senate, but neither of them would discuss the subject after the meeting.

"I can't help you," Hart told reporters. "I haven't left the Navy yet. I'm going to Connecticut next week and I'll naturally see Governor Baldwin at that time."

Hart said the question of whether he will sit as a Democrat or a Republican would be "one of the last things decided."

The question of how the retiring Navy officer will classify himself arose from a series of circumstances. For one thing, he is replacing a Democrat. In addition, his appointment became possible only through cooperation of Connecticut Democrats.

It took a special act of the Connecticut legislature, one chamber of which is in control of Democrats, to grant Baldwin appointive power and eliminate the need for a special election.

Careful Consideration And Caution Appears To Be Congressional Reaction

PRESIDENT TO BE CHIEF

Some Solons Fear Service Would Be Too Much Like American Gestapo

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—Caution and careful consideration appeared to be congressional reaction today to the proposed super-intelligence service now under consideration by President Roosevelt, his cabinet and high army and navy officials.

While some members of both houses thought the proposal good, others feared that an "information service" would be too much like an American "gestapo."

Authoritative sources, disclosing that consideration was not being given the idea, said that Maj. Gen. William J. Donovan, director of the Office of Strategic Services, had outlined the organization which would operate directly under the President. It would coordinate the intelligence activities of the armed forces and various civilian government agencies.

Seen As Peace Aid

Sen. Edwin C. Johnson, D. Colo., who himself proposed a "real information service" for the United States as the best means of halting preparations for aggression "at the outset," endorsed the Donovan proposal "in principle."

Johnson withheld approval of Donovan's proposed method of operating such a service because "I don't know much about the method."

"The United States must have an effective intelligence system operating in every country of the world," Johnson said, "because our state, war and navy departments must know what is going on. Then we can be advised the moment a country starts preparing for aggression and take the steps necessary to stop that aggression cold at the outset."

Favors Separate Rule

Sen. Homer Ferguson, R. Mich., said that while he was not adverse to centralization of American intelligence services, "I would not favor centering it under the President or the military authorities."

"We must be careful. We do not want any semblance of a Gestapo here," he said.

Sen. Robert F. Wagner, D. N. Y., one of the President's staunchest supporters, said he was "generally in favor" of the proposal but that he would want to study it carefully before endorsing it.

Sen. Joseph H. Ball, R. Minn., also said he wanted to study it. Over in the house, Chairman Hatton Sumners, D. Tex., of the (Continued on Page Two)

JAPANESE AGAIN SHAKE CABINET IN VICTORY HUNT

Tokyo radio said today Japanese Premier General Kuniaki Koiso has made a "partial shakeup" in his cabinet.

The broadcast, recorded by United Press at San Francisco, quoted a Japanese Imperial board of information announcement. It said two members of the Koiso cabinet had been relieved of their posts at their own request and that the minister of state without portfolio had been transferred to the education ministry.

Takeo Tanaka, chief secretary of the cabinet, "was relieved of his post at his own request and nominated to the house of peers," Tokyo said.

Lt. Gen. Harushige Ninomika, minister of education, also was "relieved" at his own request because of illness and replaced by Count Hideo Kodama, who formerly was minister of state without portfolio.

Hisatada Hirose, former minister of welfare, replaced Tanaka as chief secretary of the cabinet and also took over duties of Count Hideo Tokama state minister without portfolio, who was appointed minister of education.

The Red Army already has hurled the last war barrier before Berlin—the Oder river—and "it is wholly within the power of the Allies to change the situation radically in the west, too," the broadcast said.

ANOTHER WAVE OF HUN TERROR SWEEPS NORWAY

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 10—A new wave of Nazi terror swept Norway today following the execution of 34 Norwegian patriots in reprisal for the assassination of the Quisling Gestapo Chief Karl Martinussen.

Martinussen was shot to death Thursday when enroute to his office in Oslo, and a few hours later 19 patriots were rounded up, tried summarily and executed by Maj. Vidkun Quisling's puppet government.

Another 15 were tried and executed in Oslo last night, and advances from the Norse capital indicated the purge was continuing.

Martinussen, one of the "most hated collaborators in Norway," had been a member of the Nazi party since 1933. He became chief of the Norwegian Gestapo in 1943 after a visit to Berlin, and last June he assumed the additional post of commander of the Norwegian Hird, Quisling's SS troops.

President Asked To Defer Draft of Ninth Son of Eastern Woman

LEHIGHTON, Pa., Feb. 10—Marcus Smith was 18 today. At 10 a. m. he registered for selective service while the town waited for President Roosevelt to decide whether the nation needs him as well as his eight brothers.

Marcus patted his mother on the shoulder and walked to the local draft board where Chairman H. B. Saeger was waiting for him.

"If I've got to go, I've got to go," said Marcus. "I'm ready to go. But mother doesn't like it."

His mother received a telegram from the War department yesterday that one of Marcus' brothers, Pfc. Clinton Smith, 20, was missing in action in France. His mother accepted the word tearfully, but refused to believe that he would not come back.

Plea Made To FDR

The community of Pennsylvania Dutch rallied around her last night. Civic leaders sent a telegram to President Roosevelt. It read:

"We pray you, as President and humanitarian, to alleviate to some extent the sorrow that grim war has brought this mother. In this extreme case, a deferment to her ninth son would be in keeping with all that is honorable and just."

"In this, we believe every American and surely every mother will concur."

SO SORRY — GRIN OF YAMASHITA LACKS REASON

The Tokyo newspaper Asahi Shimbun today attempted to salvage a bit of confidence from the Japanese position in the Philippines by printing a picture of Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita "with a beaming smile on his jolly, rotund face." Tokyo radio reported in a broadcast recorded by United Press in San Francisco.

Presumably referring to the whirlwind American campaign on Luzon nearing its climax in the center of Manila, Yamashita said in an interview he had set a "snare" for Gen. Douglas MacArthur and that the general had fallen into it.

"The first word that slipped through his (Yamashita's) mouth was a reassurance and note of confidence in his unerring strategy," Tokyo said.

"Sinking heavily into his deep, upholstered armchair, the general said — 'Douglas MacArthur has fallen into a snare set by my own personal hands; he shall regret it.'"

It was recalled Japanese armchair strategists previously had MacArthur "trapped" on Leyte island and at other points in the New Guinea and Philippines campaigns.

RUSS EXPECTS QUICK RESULTS FROM PARLEY

Radio Moscow said today that joint military operations planned at the Allied Big Three conference will produce "decisive results in the very near future."

The broadcast, reported by the FCC, said the conference raised the curtain on the "final phase" of the war against Germany.

The Red Army already has hurled the last war barrier before Berlin—the Oder river—and "it is wholly within the power of the Allies to change the situation radically in the west, too," the broadcast said.

DAILY FAG HUNT COSTS 8,000,000 MAN HOURS

NEW YORK, Feb. 10—The Wall Street Journal, quoting a "federal functionary," said that if each of the nation's 32,000,000 smokers spend 15 minutes daily hunting cigarettes they use up 8,000,000 man hours. With 120,000 additional man hours a day, the cigarette companies could beat the shortage.

Japs Move Prisoners Into China

High Yank Officers Taken To "Safer Place" By Jittery Nips

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—The Japanese, jittery in the path of the speeding American offensive in the Pacific, have spirited one of their most important collections of war prisoners from the island of Formosa to the interior of China.

Included in the list of important prisoners moved by the Japanese is Lt. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, who led the Americans in their final stand on Bataan and Corregidor after Gen. Douglas MacArthur was ordered by President Roosevelt to escape to Australia.

The entire list consists of 18 generals including Wainwright, five major generals and 12 brigadier generals; 119 colonels; six navy captains; and 34 enlisted men.

The war department said it had been notified of the move in a cable just received from its prisoner of war department.

The prisoners, the department said, had been taken from camps at Taihoku, Kauchow, Kago and Heito on Formosa to the Hotel Camp, Mukden, Manchuria.

Wainwright, who is the Mikado's most prized captive, held the fortress of Corregidor with his heroic band of men until he was forced to surrender May 6, 1942.

The sudden removal of Wainwright and the other 166 Americans to the Chinese mainland indicates that the Japanese are fearful of an early attack on the island of Formosa, which has already been attacked several times by U. S. task forces and Superfortresses.

The emperor's jailers apparently don't want to be caught napping again in the same fashion that permitted Gen. MacArthur to liberate a large group of American military prisoners in his quick advance on Manila.

Removal of the American prisoners to Manchuria rather than to Japan shows that the Japanese are taking no chances whatsoever. Both American military men and Chinese authorities have predicted the Japanese would resist on the Asiatic mainland long after their home islands are taken.

RIOTS RAGING IN KASSEL, SAY SWISS REPORT

LONDON, Feb. 10—Reports from the continent said today that riots were raging in Kassel, one of Germany's largest cities on the Fulda river, and that a food riot broke out recently between civilians and Nazi storm troops in Berlin.

The Zurich correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph reported that Kassel, 91 miles northeast of Frankfurt, had been under martial law since Wednesday. A majority of the city's administrative officials and police were reported to have abandoned their posts to face the wrath of the Gestapo and SS rather than strikers or so-called communists.

The Exchange Telegraph correspondent said bloody clashes were reported in the Wolfgang powder factory at Kassel after war workers refused to augment meager food allotments.

The reported battle between hungry German civilians and Nazi storm troops at a food kitchen in Berlin recently was disclosed in a Moscow broadcast.

FREE CIGARET OFFER BRINGS JOB HUNTERS

CHICAGO, Feb. 10—An advertisement for a secretary offering free cigarettes, $30 weekly and every other Saturday off brought the applications pouring in to the Galter Manufacturing Co. today.

The U. S. Employment Service, interviewing the first applicant, Miss Virginia Walden, 19, asked if she would like the job.

"You bet," she replied. "I don't smoke and my boy friend doesn't either, but Dad sure burns 'em up—when he can get 'em."

Violent Fighting Still In Progress As Japs In Manila Fall Back

BULLETIN

LONDON, Feb. 10—American heavy bombers renewed the assault on Germany today, hitting vital Nazi army supplies at Duellman near the Dutch border in the wake of an Allied night assault on railways and truck convoys in Holland and Western Germany.

More than 150 Eighth Air Force Flying Fortresses and about 130 Mustang fighters raided the fuel depot at Duellman, southwest of Muenster, and lashed at the Nazi submarine pens on the Dutch coast at IJmuiden.

Both the day and night raids were designed to hamper the German forces facing the offensive of Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's 21st Army group.

The American bombers encountered bad weather, which forced them to bomb the Duellman depot by instruments, although the IJmuiden submarine pens were bombed by submarine.

North of Berlin the Russians have driven to within 25 miles or less of the Baltic port of Stettin.

In the Pacific, violent fighting was in progress in the burning southern part of Manila, where the trapped Japanese were being pushed back toward the waterfront for a suicide stand in the old walled city.

LITTLE GAIN IN PRODUCTION OF FARM MACHINES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—Farm machinery production showed "little improvement" between July 1 and Dec. 31, 1944, the War Production Board said today, and will continue to fall behind schedule.

WPB officials told a farm machinery and equipment advisory meeting that production, exclusive of wheel tractors and repair parts, was 22.9 per cent behind schedule as compared with a 25 per cent lag for the four months ending Oct. 31.

Wheel-type tractor production is close to schedule, WPB said, and is expected to remain so. Manpower shortages and a shortage of malleable and gray iron castings are responsible for program lags.

PUSH THREATENS TO TURN END OF SIEGFRIED LINE

Nazi Resistance Stiffens As Hitler Hurries To Plug Gap

(Continued from Page One) an Allied column battled to the Rhine at Millingen in a three-mile advance from captured Leuth. Savage street fighting was reported inside Millingen early today as the Germans were forced back against the river.

Berlin broadcasts predicted that the British Second Army and American Ninth along the Roer river to the south were about to start another offensive into the Cologne plain. There were signs that the Germans were trying to block it by releasing flood waters from the dams at the head waters of the Roer.

Spillways Blown Front dispatches said some of the spillways were blown up or opened yesterday and the river was rising. There was no indication that the main Schwanenau dam had been blown up.

The American First Army was battling into the flood control system and had the Schwanenau dam within rifle range yesterday with the capture of a bridge just north of it.

Farther south on the front, the American Third Army outflanked the German communications center of Pruem after breaching the Siegfried defenses on a front of almost ten miles. At the closest point, the Americans were within three-quarters of a mile of Pruem. The southern wing of the Third Army below Pruem expanded two of its 10 bridgeheads across the Our and Sure rivers.

Operations on the Eastern Front were marked by significant extensions on both flanks of Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's First White Russian Army driving on Berlin.

Moscow Silent Moscow preserved official silence regarding the center of the front opposite Berlin, although field dispatches said there was fierce fighting in Kuestrin and the suburbs of Frankfurt and Fuerstenberg, main anchors of the Oder line 35 to 42 miles from the capital.

German accounts indicated that Marshal Ivan S. Konev's army south of Zhukov had broadened to nearly 20 miles the wedge it was driving between Berlin and the Silesian capital of Breslau. One and perhaps two of the railways from Breslau to Berlin had been severed.

In the north, Zhukov's right wing gained up to 10 miles along a 25-mile front in the march to Stettin. One column captured Brallentin, 29 miles southeast of Stettin, and pushed on to within 25 miles or less of that city.

While the battle for the west bank of the Oder proceeds opposite Berlin, equally important operations are in progress in Pomerania and Silesia on either flank of Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's main forces.

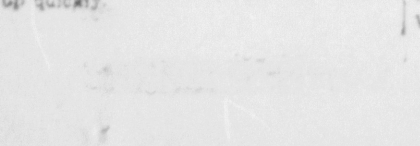

The spectacular advance of Zhukov's central spearhead to within less than 40 miles of the German capital tends to obscure the working of the master strategic plan which is being carried out from the Baltic to the Carpathians and below.

The great Russian drive into Germany involves military considerations just as weighty as the occupation of Berlin. There are Nazi armies all along the extensive front which must be knocked out if Germany's military collapse is to be complete.

It is improbable that Zhukov would attempt to thrust a long exposed spearhead to Berlin without first reducing the Oder strongholds of Kuestrin, Frankfurt and Fuerstenberg. Even then, his flanks need to be protected against counter-attacks by the considerable German forces in Pomerania and Western Silesia.

That detail apparently is being taken care of by the drives toward Stettin in Pomerania and across the Oder beyond Breslau in Silesia. The one drive, toward Stettin, is aimed at knocking out that key communications center and possibly, by extension to the Baltic coast proper, to cut off all Pomerania. Zhukov's northern flank then would be entirely secure.

SNYDER IS FINED FOR LEAVING ACCIDENT SCENE

A $100 fine and a suspended 30-day jail sentence was imposed on Dewey Snyder when he pleaded guilty to the charge of leaving the scene of an accident in common pleas court Saturday.

Judge Meeker Terwilliger also suspended the driving license of Snyder for one year. The judge said the jail sentence was suspended pending good behavior.

A secret indictment charging leaving the scene of an accident was returned by the January term grand jury which ignored a second degree manslaughter charge. Snyder was accused of being the driver of the car which struck and fatally injured John Buzzard at Derby.

LOUISIANA PLANS TO CUT PLANT GROWTH IN BAYOUS

NEW ORLEANS — Louisiana scientists have recently completed a survey of the state's bayous, and reveal a plan to make them navigable as well as more productive of fish.

They are now conducting experiments involving the lowering of water levels by as much as four feet during seasons of non-use, thus ridding lakes, bayous and streams of aquatic growths which choke the waterways and impede passage of small craft.

Another experiment is being made to control plant growth through the use of fertilizer, causing an abnormal increase of microscopic water plants which, by screening the light from the water, would retard development of submerged plants.

Dr. Nelson T. Gowanloch, chief biologist of the state department of conservation, said that "this will also increase available food for fish, ducks, geese or other wildlife, and shades out other underwater plants."

The growth of plants which need control are the water shield, the Carolina fanwort, the American lotus and the water hyacinth. The American lotus, for example, grows rapidly, is worthless as food for fish, ducks, geese or other wildlife, and shades out other underwater plants.

One of the questions involved in Hart's selection of political alignment is the matter of committee assignments.

One of the most logical assignments for a career Navy man obviously would be the naval affairs committee.

OPINION SPLIT ON ROOSEVELT SUPER SPY PLAN

Says Plan "Good" Rep. John M. Coffey, D., Wash., said he was "inclined" to regard Donovan's plan "good." He said, however, that there would be a "a lot of opposition from within the justice department and the Army and Navy."

Rep. Clare E. Hoffman, R., Mich., attacked the plan as "another New Deal move right along the Hitler line" to centralize more power in Washington.

"What this country needs," Hoffman said, "is a firm, independent justice department such as the FBI used to be in the early days of Director J. Edgar Hoover."

Advocates of the Donovan plan pointed out that it would improve the efficiency of the Army, Navy, state and commerce departments, FBI, secret service, international revenue agents and federal communications commission. These groups all have their own intelligence, which means duplication, it was said.

Under Donovan's plan, each agency would pursue its own intelligence operations for its own purpose without interference from the central agency. However, the product of each would be pooled and analyzed by experts so that information gleaned by one and regarded as unimportant would become available to another to which it might be vital.

Two Pickaway County Service Men Killed; Sgt. Matz Wins Praise

Two Pickaway county natives have been killed while another has been cited for extraordinary daring, according to news received by their families.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Fausnaugh, Cedar Hill, was informed by a War department telegram their son M/Sgt. Lloyd Fausnaugh was killed January 25 in France. A graduate of Walnut township school in 1937, Sgt. Fausnaugh was a welder in the Army Air corps. He worked on the farm before going into the Army. Besides the parents he is survived by two brothers, Carl and Boyd.

John Henry "Jack" Peters, 19, native of the Ringgold community, was killed in an automobile accident near Indio, Calif., his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Peters, Lancaster, has been informed by the Navy department. Peters, an aviation ordnanceman third class, was stationed at the Thermal California Naval Air Base.

He is the grandson of John H. Peters, Circleville, and nephew of E. W. Peters, Circleville. His family lived in the Ringgold vicinity until about 1930. His body is to be returned to Lancaster for funeral services.

A story from headquarters of the 99th Infantry division on the Western front tells of the courage of Staff Sgt. Bernard R. Matz, son of John R. Matz, Route 1, Stoutsville. The story says:

"Because of the courage and daring of Staff Sgt. Bernard R. Matz of Stoutsville, Ohio, a squad leader with the 393rd Infantry Regiment, six of Hitler's big guns will never fire another shot."

"As leader of a patrol, Sgt. Matz brought in a report that they found six German self-propelled assault guns bogged down somewhere within the enemy lines."

"Then, equipped with gasoline and thermite bombs, he led his patrol out again and in spite of heavy fire from the enemy succeeded in thoroughly burning the big guns and bringing back his patrol without the loss of a single man."

Sgt. Matz was one of the first three volunteers from Pickaway county.

This might be an excellent use for some of the barbed wire left over from the beachheads and barricades.

Placed between a man and the War Bonds he's safely tucked away, it would give him pause . . . in case he was tempted to cash in a single Bond.

It would make him stop and think . . .

Stop and think that those Bonds will mean income . . . security . . . perhaps even a good measure of financial independence in the unpredictable postwar world.

Stop and think that every Bond will bring back—not just its purchase price—but $4 for every $3 at maturity.

Stop and think that holding War Bonds is as vital to Victory as buying them . . . and as vital to a secure future for the individual, a secure future for his country.

Put your War Bonds in a safe place. And keep them there . . . as you keep on buying more.

Ten years from now, you'll thank your lucky stars you did.

PHILIPPINE BRETHREN

AMERICANS who can remember when our soldiers were fighting the Filipinos, and when it seemed their patriotic duty to fight against us with all their energy, have taken extreme satisfaction in the unanimous rising of the natives in this war to help our forces drive out the Japanese.

The Japs are orientals, and the Filipinos have often been regarded as orientals in spite of their adopted Spanish tongue. But there is certainly nothing alien in the fervency with which those brethren of the South Seas have adopted our English language, law and customs, and in the fervency with which they now cling to our institutions and standards.

The stories from Luzon lately have been filled with the warmth of Philippine friendship, and the gratitude of those adopted brethren for our rescue of them from brutal and arrogant neighbors, the Japanese. They will understand the difference in standards and ways of life represented by the Japs and the Americans, and they are wholeheartedly with us.

It was not so in the beginning, when they fought us for years. But that was before they really understood us, and before we ourselves came to realize that it was incompatible with our American principles to hold them in bondage.

COMING BACK

RELATIVES and friends of soldiers in the Fifth Infantry will be delighted to hear that it has been granted top priority in the Third Army for 30-day furloughs in the United States. The Fifth landed in Iceland on Sept. 5, 1941. It was the first American division overseas, and it is, therefore, fitting that it should be the first one to get furloughs at home.

It is too soon for the friends and relatives to begin looking for letters telling of immediate home-coming or to listen for the telephone or the doorbell indicating arrival of the looked-for soldier. It takes time for the army red tape to unroll itself, and at present every division finds itself pretty well occupied, in one capacity or another, with the big drive for Berlin.

So weeks, or even months, may ensue before the boys actually get to their homes. When they do, the arrangement is for a month's furlough, not permanent discharge. But it's good news anyhow. Every American, whether or not he knows any of the men in question, will rejoice for them and their home folk.

British and French Calm | Paul V. McNutt Foresees
War Manpower Chief Finds | Three Peace Alternatives

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—War Manpower Chief Paul McNutt, back from an inspection tour of France, said: "Everybody I saw abroad was calm and purposeful. Only Washington has the jitters."

"You found no hysteria, no private quarreling over there?" I asked.

"Absolutely none!" said McNutt with emphasis. "Over there everybody knows there is a job to be done, what the job is and that the thing to do is keep plugging steadily until the job is finished."

"And what help do they need from us?" McNutt hesitated a moment. Then he found the words he was looking for.

"They need so many rounds per gun per day! What I mean is that it is the foot soldier who is going to win the war. Bombing has been disturbing but not conclusive. Winning this war is going to be like winning most wars—taking something and holding it."

McNutt, or Governor as most people call him, in honor of his one-time position in Indiana, wouldn't speculate on the date of the European war's end. He did say that there were three possible peacees:

1—Unconditional surrender. 2—Separate peace by individual armies. 3—Guerrilla warfare.

McNutt thought it likely that guerrilla warfare would be the answer.

Here again would the foot soldier be needed. For guerrilla warfare still means picking off of the enemy almost one by one.

Was there enough food in the places he visited? Plenty of food, if he did lose a lot of weight. But there was certainly not enough

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAYNER
(Subbing for Mallon)

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Snow is so unpopular in New York right now that it may become necessary for Mayor Fiorello La Guardia to melt it into its proper place with one of his scorching Sunday radio roasts. The ordinary removal system hasn't been too successful because of the lack of manpower.

One theatre operator was observed yesterday following a strange routine. He stood in front of his establishment for 10 minutes counting falling snowflakes. Then he dashed inside and down to the basement to count the lumps of coal. He is one of the "non-essential" business men the mayor won't allow to have any more coal as long as the tight situation in fuel and transportation lasts.

The mayor has suggested that theatres might find it possible to remain open after their fuel is exhausted because the body heat generated by a crowd in an enclosed place would keep things warm. A recently disappointed dramatist commented that this might be effective on ordinary occasions but that it wouldn't work for the opening nights of new plays. First-nighters, he explained bitterly, are so cold-blooded that their presence in an unheated auditorium would lower the temperature instead of raise it. They possibly might all freeze to death, he added—hopefully.

The slush in the town's better gutters is so deep that only hip boots or pontoon bridges could cope adequately with it. The army has priority on both of these remedies.

The usual capacity crowd floundered through the weather to and from the Ethel Barrymore theatre for the opening of "One Man Show," a play that some people are going to champion enthusiastically while others look longingly toward the exits well before the final curtain.

The play is the work of Ruth Goodman and Augustus Goetz and relates the close attachment between a widower and his daughter who run an art gallery. When he decides it will be good for her if he gets out and lets her shift for herself, there are romantic results far beyond his expectations and he lives to regret his brain-storm because she does leave him flat in the end. It is a story of parent domination without stress on the Freudian aspects and undoubtedly a sincere dramatic effort well played by Constance Cummings, Frank Conroy, Hugh Franklin, James Rennie and John Archer.

However, I could not help thinking as I watched it of a character in I believe, the late George M. Cohan's old travesty, "The Tavern," who would stick his head inside the door every once in a while and demand, "what's all the shootin' fur?" and the romance kept reminding me of that old railroad story about "Off Again, On Again, Gone Again Finnegan."

But there is a Miss Cummings to look at—the same Miss Cummings who graced musical comedy choruses some 15 years ago, succeeded both here and in England as a dramatic actress and married Benn Levy, one of England's foremost playwrights. This is her first visit here since before the war started and her performance shows that she has not been idle in the theatre. Miss Cummings is gowned for her role by Valentine and she wears at least one number that is going to have every woman who sees the play drooling and envious. The men just drool.

heat. The Ritz hotel in London was so cold that you slept with all your clothes on, including shoes, overcoat and knitted helmet. And then you weren't warm.

● HAD THIS THOUGHT in an amusing letter from a veteran at Walter Reed hospital:

"Judging from the row between former Vice President Henry Wallace and former Secretary of Commerce and RFC Chairman Jesse Jones that the way to keep a fellow in fighting trim is to give him a good government job."

"There seems to be a lot of pugnacity still left in both Jesse and Henry. How about using up some of this in a useful way? Put them in uniforms and send them off to help win the war personally. They ought to be fine in some super kind of K. P." (Signed) You-Can't-Fool-Me.

Dear You-Can't-Fool-Me: I do believe you are jealous. Why should you in the service have all the excitement? Why shouldn't some of the stay-at-homes have a chance to let off steam? Maybe, if there was more of the Wallace-Jones kind of hitting behind the lines the urge to fight could be used up safely at home.

If you are kept busy defending yourself, you do lose that yen to save the world. Right?

● A NEW YORK FRIEND hoped she "could get away from this place" before she gets the "Washington eye."

The Washington eye? What kind of an eye is that, I asked. Is it crossed or jaundiced? No? Is it a cocked eye—cocked from casting too many apprehensive glances here and there?

"You've almost got the definition of the Washington eye," my New York friend said. "The Washington eye, as I have seen it, is the eye that is always looking for somebody more important."

"It always goes to cocktail parties. It glances over your shoulder while you are saying your best sentences, in search of a person somewhere, anywhere in the crowd who might be more useful. Somebody who is more definitely on the up and up than you are. It's the roving, predatory eye. It's always looking for somebody more desirable to devour."

It's dreadful, this Washington eye, my New York friend insists. It is ill bred and stupid. And the funny thing is, it really gets nowhere. It is a blind eye. Quite without vision. And dim before it starts roving.

DIET AND HEALTH

By Dr. Herman N. Bundesen,
President, Chicago Board of Health

Ulcer of the stomach and first part of the bowel is one of the many conditions for which the exact cause has not yet been found. However, it would appear that there are forms of treatment which can be successfully used to control ulcers, if not completely cure them. There seems to be a tendency for ulcers to recur after they have healed. It is quite important that the patient's general health be taken care of. This is necessary because it has been found that emotional and nervous tension, as well as fatigue and infections, contribute to the development of ulcers.

For the treatment of fatigue and nervous tension, rest in bed is quite useful. It is for this reason that a period of rest is usually advised at the beginning of treatment for ulcers. It has been found that most patients will rest better if they are away from home. A few days in the hospital, as a rule, will be found beneficial. It may also be helpful at this time to give some mild sedative or quieting drug, such as phenobarbital. Large doses are not needed.

Just how long a period of rest in bed should be employed in treatment of a patient with ulcers of the stomach will depend on how quickly the patient responds. As a rule, it is thought that five to ten days are sufficient. During this rest period the patient is carefully examined by the physician to determine if there are any infections in the teeth, tonsils, sinuses or elsewhere in the body. If any are found, they are, of course, cleared up.

It is also helpful at this time to attempt to educate the patient into proper habits of living, so that recurrence of the ulcer may perhaps be prevented. The patient must be taught how to relax. He should not be restricted in his activities to too great an extent, since this may make him rebellious. Careful planning of activities by the patient will do much to relieve strain due to overwork and lack of rest. He should be cautioned against undue haste. He should have plenty of time for dressing, eating and getting to his place of business without feeling that he is under constant pressure. Mealtime, particularly, should be a period of rest.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

"Legally, if they turned in all that treasure, they could be sent to prison. Actually, I don't believe it would happen. But you can see how they might almost rather die than surrender that gold—if you stop to think what sort of men they are and how long they've depended on it. You can see why they're afraid to exchange it—these days. Let it sit. That's their idea. You can also see why the wire about Hank's approach, his mention of a 'new grub-stake,' and the sudden, violent death of Jim Calder got all three of us in a tizzy. It looked as if our sins would find us out. That's what Jim was razzled about when he barged in here."

Aggie felt a need for his pipe. "I can 'see' everything you've said," he replied, after lighting it. "Except that I can't yet understand why none of you came out with it—under the present circumstances."

"I am coming out with it," Sarah said. "In doing so, I'm spilling private matters that have been in the dark for thirty-odd years. I'm betraying George Davis and Eyrone Waite. At least, they'd consider it betrayal. They haven't told this story to Wes Wickman—or to the corner—or anybody. I'm risking their hatred. I'm risking revenge, even. I've said to myself ten thousand times in the last three days that if I tell, and if it proves that Hank is still somewhere in the lake, and Jim did stumble into some youngster's deadfall, I'll never be able to hold my head up around here again. We felt mighty serious about that cache. Even Jim would never have dared to violate it, I think."

"Are you sure?" she answered after a moment. "Yes. Certain, almost."

"Couldn't you check?"

"I've got the mumps! I'm sick! I can't poke in cellars."

"I mean—have George Davis check. Or Waite."

"It's difficult now; the club is constantly milling with people. Guests all day. Employees at night. We made our deposits in the winter, when it was empty. Our own manager was in charge. We'd bring up what he thought was wise. We had our own wine stock, and bins, in the cellar."

"Couldn't your 'other' cellar have been found by somebody else?"

Sarah shrugged. "Nobody living knows where it is—except the four of us. Three—now. We made sure of that. It's cut in bedrock—and we're using an old safe which belonged to the Sachem House. It's beautifully hidden; it was meant to be. The smoothies in the seventies and eighties used that safe. In all these years—nobody has ever tampered with the place—or found the entrance."

"Old fool," she muttered. "Old sissy! How'd you get me in this bed?"

Aggie grinned. "Levitation." Sarah's answering grin was faint but game. "What a powerhouse! Well! All the Plums were dynamite in their day. I feel terrible."

"John's calling Davis." He heard feet again.

"I can't get them," John said anxiously. "Wire out of order, the operator says."

Aggie dropped the towel on a chair beside the bed. He was immobile for a second—two—three. He became paler. Perspiration dampened his forehead. On a chair were his black trousers, casually folded. He put them on over his pajamas. He stuffed in the tops as if they had tails, like a shirt. "I'll go over," he said quietly. "You stay with Sarah. Get her some water to drink. She's all right, but Dr. Davis should be here." He started for the door and came back for his pipe, tobacco and matches. Sarah was watching him and her eyes were scared.

He went through the steps he had taken on the night of the twentieth: getting keys from the teapot, reassuring Windle, starting the station wagon, driving swiftly through the blue dark, and banging on the Davis door. This time, lights flashed on. But Danielle came down the stairs in the same negligee. He sucked in his breath when he saw her. She swung open the door and said, "Yes?"

"Sarah's pretty sick. Your phone's not working."

"Oh, I'll wake Dad."

She was gone. Sharp steps upstairs. Distant knocking. Her voice, calling her father. A door squealing open. Then the steps—running. She talked on the stairs. "He's not in his room. Hasn't been there! He—! Come on!"

Aggie followed her through the house again—as before. She threw words over her shoulder. "He said something—when I came home from the club—about going to his dark-room for a while."

They went through the large, old-fashioned kitchen, a pantry, a woodshed. Down steps. Into the moonlight again. Danielle cried, "Yes! The light's on! Thank heaven! I was frightened!"

He could see a small square of light on the leaves of a maple. They entered the garage, passed the cars there, turned into the hall, and Danielle knocked on a door. No response. She twisted the handle. "Locked," she said. "Maybe he fell asleep." She raised her voice again. "Dad! Oh, Dad!"

Aggie reached in front of her and tried the handle. The door was locked, all right. And it was a sturdy door. He was trying to keep calm. "We could go out to that window—and look in. He may be taking a stroll. Visiting somebody. Something."

She jerked her head affirmatively and they ran back outdoors.

"What about somebody like Jack—who's up here alone all winter?" Sarah smiled. "Jack? If he found the cellar—he'd tell the world! It would be a game for him. Fun. We'd get telegrams: 'Come up! Great mystery uncovered! You know. He might love discovering such a place, but he'd never crack it open without permission. He's such a lamb! The truth is—he'd never find it. You'd have to blast. It isn't something you can stumble on. You've got to know it's there, and know how to get to it.'"

Old John's feet sounded on the stairs. He brought in a tray on which were coffee cups and a steaming glass container. He looked reproachfully at Sarah. "You should be in bed, Miss Sarah. Since you're not, I thought you might like some coffee. I heard you talking."

"Yes, John. I'm going back, soon. I wanted to have a talk with my nephew. It's done me a world of good! And this is very thoughtful!"

Aggie nodded. "Genius, John." They waited until John had gone downstairs again. Aggie dropped four lumps of sugar into his aunt's cup. "That puts a new face on what's happening here!"

"Does it, Aggie? Are you sure?" She stirred the coffee and drained the cup.

"I don't know exactly what I mean, myself. But—a fortune in gold stowed away in a cellar! That, somehow, is more in scale with things." He smiled at his aunt. "I'm mighty glad you told me. At least—we know what to think about. What to check on next. You better get back to your room."

Sarah nodded, leaned ponderously forward, and tried to stand. The effort sapped the blood from her brain. She tottered, smiled rather foolishly, and fell back in a faint. Aggie heard his voice shouting for John; the old man's feet clattered on the stairs. He wrapped one arm around his aunt's back and thrust the other under her knees. With a strain that enlarged the veins along his temples, he lifted his aunt and carried her to his bed.

"Call Dr. Davis, at once," he said, when John entered.

John hurried down the stairs again. Aggie listened to Sarah's heart. It was feeble and uneven, but not desperately so. Just a faint fatigue. Strain. Relief. Good old Sarah. He unwrapped the cold, moist towel from her neck and began to wipe her face with it, roughly. Sarah stirred.

"Old fool," she muttered. "Old sissy! How'd you get me in this bed?"

Aggie grinned. "Levitation." Sarah's answering grin was faint but game. "What a powerhouse! Well! All the Plums were dynamite in their day. I feel terrible."

"John's calling Davis." He heard feet again.

"I can't get them," John said anxiously. "Wire out of order, the operator says."

Aggie dropped the towel on a chair beside the bed. He was immobile for a second—two—three. He became paler. Perspiration dampened his forehead. On a chair were his black trousers, casually folded. He put them on over his pajamas. He stuffed in the tops as if they had tails, like a shirt. "I'll go over," he said quietly. "You stay with Sarah. Get her some water to drink. She's all right, but Dr. Davis should be here." He started for the door and came back for his pipe, tobacco and matches. Sarah was watching him and her eyes were scared.

He went through the steps he had taken on the night of the twentieth: getting keys from the teapot, reassuring Windle, starting the station wagon, driving swiftly through the blue dark, and banging on the Davis door. This time, lights flashed on. But Danielle came down the stairs in the same negligee. He sucked in his breath when he saw her. She swung open the door and said, "Yes?"

"Sarah's pretty sick. Your phone's not working."

"Oh, I'll wake Dad."

She was gone. Sharp steps upstairs. Distant knocking. Her voice, calling her father. A door squealing open. Then the steps—running. She talked on the stairs. "He's not in his room. Hasn't been there! He—! Come on!"

Aggie followed her through the house again—as before. She threw words over her shoulder. "He said something—when I came home from the club—about going to his dark-room for a while."

They went through the large, old-fashioned kitchen, a pantry, a woodshed. Down steps. Into the moonlight again. Danielle cried, "Yes! The light's on! Thank heaven! I was frightened!"

an unfortunate habit of carelessness in effort and thoughtlessness toward friends, however. Cultivate self-reliance and thoroughness in your work and you will prosper exceedingly. You may be unreasonably exacting today, due to the complex planetary vibrations. Do not make a fuss about minor incidents, nor consider yourself neglected because you can't have your own way.

Hints on Etiquette
The only time an engraved card of thanks may properly be sent is by a public official who has been overwhelmed with messages of sympathy or congratulation.

Horoscope for Sunday
By nature you are calm and serene, but circumstances can stir

you to intense excitement. Try to overcome a tendency to be lackadaisical in your work, as well as surly and sarcastic toward others. Strive to be more cheerful and charitable and you will be happy. Two winds are mentioned in Solomon's song. Providence sometimes sends the north wind of conviction to bring penitence, and sometimes He sends the south wind of love to meet us in gratitude. Today mull over this truth while radiant planetary aspects are in force.

One-Minute Test Answers

It didn't look so hot after West led the heart 9 and the dummy was disclosed. Two possible losers stared at him in diamonds and one in clubs. But if the diamond A was in the East, he still had a squeaking chance. So his heart A took the first trick, he went to dummy with the spade Q to the K and led the diamond 4. In came the A, making the K good, and it won the returned diamond 8.

Then came the squeeze building. The spade 2 to the 10 put him in dummy to lead the diamond 9 and ruff it with the spade J. Knowing now that East had the hearts better than his 8, he also had to find West unable to beat the club 8 on the third round. So he scored the spade A, ruffed the heart 2 in dummy, then led the dummy's last two spades. As the last was played, he also had three clubs in dummy, and in his hand three clubs and the heart 8. East holding the heart K and the club Q-J-9, had to chuck one of them. Knowing of South's heart, he had to hold his K, so tossed off the club 9; the A and K then dropped his Q and J, making the 6 good for the last trick.

Your Week-End Question
There are, of course, quite a number of different good reasons why a No Trump game declarer might refuse to hold up his ace on the first trick. Can you think of a case in which two of the reasons are combined in a single play?

A child born on this day will be singularly endowed with talents, originality, ingenuity and exceptional skill for attainment of most advanced and noteworthy goals, with possibly unique or dramatic adventures, romance or renown.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, February 10

A SPLENDID day for the concentrated and well organized plans for reaching out for ambitious goals, whether this refers to business, industry, or professional aims, as well to the more intimate hopes and wishes affecting the home, social or romantic aspirations. Increase, expansion, gain all along the line, with new contracts or agreements, some needful change or journeys, but all must be handled with good judgment and practical plans not impulsive or over extravagant or zealous moves. Young people are especially favored.

Those whose birthday it is may take advantage of exceptional openings for putting over their most ambitious plans and objectives, whether these lie in the realm of business, industry, new projects or in the more personal affairs of the heart and home. Social affiliations, varied interests of youth and its quest for pleasure are encouraged. In all connections the tendency to overdo indulgence should be curbed lest there be penalties or regrets.

A child born on this day will be active and enterprising, with energy to spare in constructive work as well as in a healthy pursuit of pleasure. Some judicious restraints might increase its progress and enjoyments.

For Sunday, February 11

SUNDAY'S horoscope indicates a most propitious day for progress to the most cherished ideals and attainments. Whether they are to be based on the practical, intellectual, mystical or romantic, all are under excellent stimuli for fine performance, with much ingenuity, aspiration and idealism for achieving really unique accomplishment, of radical and enduring promise. Supreme happiness is in sight.

ONE CHANCE ENOUGH

WHEN you can see only one chance to make your contract—if certain cards are in some particular position—you should try for that break. Many the odds are heavily against finding them that way. But isn't it better to take a shot at the long shot than to suppose accept defeat? Even if the long chance doesn't work out, you at least can give yourself credit for not surrendering. And, if it hits the jackpot—oh, boy, what a grand and glorious feeling.

PROF. HURSH TO BE SPEAKER AT U. B. SERVICES

Professor E. M. Hursh, head of the department of sociology at Otterbein college, Westerville, will speak at the morning services in the First United Brethren church. He will represent Otterbein college as the program is launched to raise $625,000 as a centennial fund for the future progress of the college. Otterbein will celebrate her century of service to the church in 1947.

It was at a General Conference of the United Brethren Church in Christ held at Circleville in 1845, that the founding of Otterbein college was authorized but it was not formally opened until 1847.

The program aims to raise $625,000 of which $1,000 is Circleville's share to supplement the endowment, build a new library, and otherwise strengthen the effectiveness of the college for the future training of young men and women to serve their respective generations.

The Rev. J. E. Huston and Mrs. Huston are both graduates of Otterbein college. Miss Polly Jane Kerns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Kerns, of West Union street, and a member of the Circleville church, is now a student there. Her brother, Clifford Lewis Kerns, was a student at Otterbein college until he entered the armed services.

The fabric is cheery red rayon shantung, with self ruffles detailing the hips, together with a self fabric rose.

RAYON shantung is a hardy and handsome fabric for the spectator sports dress, and its color range lends itself to youthful models particularly. The frock sketched is such a one... pretty enough for dates and yet practical enough to double for general outdoor wear during a sunny resort winter. The fabric is more than usually crush-resistant, and it is a notably good performer under dry cleaning.

Washington C. H. Five Knocks CHS Tigers Out Of South Central Race

Washington C. H. cagers staged a last period rally to knock Circleville out of the running for the South Central Ohio league basketball title Friday night at Washington C. H.

The downtrodden Blue Lions suddenly came to life in the last period and won 36-33, duplicating their feat of the football season when a highly-favored Circleville team was knocked off by the Blue Lions who had not won a game. The basketball Lions had won only once in league play until Friday night.

Circleville had a chance to stay in the race for league honors but lost it in that final period. Chilli-cothe took over undisputed possession of first place by defeating Greenfield 33-26.

Circleville was leading 27-17 at one time in the third quarter. McKinney made a basket and was fouled as he shot. He made the foul too and the score was 17-20. Shaw sank a bucket and Whitmore one to come within three points of the Tigers. Hennis connected to make it 29-24 and Circleville fans sat back in their seats and quit worrying as Hennis sank another to make the score 31-24 at the end of the third quarter.

In the final period the Tigers scored once while the Blue Lions made 12 points. Whitmore made a foul, Shaw a basket and Whitmore a bucket to make the score 31-29 with four minutes left. Shaw knotted the count a minute later and with two minutes and 15 seconds left to play Whitmore put Washington ahead for the first time in the game. Leonard Hill got his only bucket of the game a moment later to knot the count. Then Whitmore was fouled as he shot and calmly sank both tries from the free throw line. Shaw added another a moment later. Just before he scored Bob Lovensheimer made a basket which apparently tied the score but the referees ruled it no good and gave him a foul shot.

The game was 3 1/2 minutes old before State Hennis scored the first basket. A moment later O'Brien tied the score. Hennis hit again before Brandenburg got a foul. Hennis sank another basket and Shaw connected. Freck Heath got a bucket and Steele a foul as the quarter ended 8-6. In the second quarter the Tigers got 14 points on baskets by Hennis, Jim Dade, Heath and Lovensheimer and fouls by Hennis and Dade to take a 22-16 lead.

The game was slow most of the way and rough all the way, although the officials called only 17 personal fouls, 10 on Circleville and seven on Washington.

Hennis was high man for the evening with 17 points, 11 of which he got the first half. Shaw led the Blue Lions with 12.

Circleville reserves, also lost after holding the lead most of the way. Washington was ahead 6-2 the first period but Circleville was on top 11-10 at the half and 16-14 at the end of the third quarter. The final score was 20-18. "Skeet" Smallwood had seven points for Circleville and Gray had the same number for Washington.

Next Friday the Tigers go to Greenfield.

Take Care of Car Or Walk, Circleville Dealers Warn

AUTOS, TRUCKS, TIRES, PARTS REALLY SCARCE

National New Car Reserve Equal To Sales Of One Day Before War

"Take care of your car or you will be walking before new ones are being made again" is the advice of Circleville automobile dealers.

Automobiles and trucks are getting scarcer and scarcer. So are tires and repair parts. And it will be a long time before new replacements are obtainable, in the opinion of local dealers.

Restrictions on the purchase of cars and tires are getting stricter almost daily. To buy a new automobile in February local residents will have to compete with priorities of residents of two entire counties. There will be one new car for each two counties in the Columbus OPA district, which includes Pickaway county. OPA officials have announced.

New car reserve is at a very low ebb as the war continues to drag out. There are now only a few more new automobiles in the country than there were sold every day before Pearl Harbor. Of the 2,000 cars to be released in the entire country in February a total of 230 will go to the district which includes Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Indiana and West Virginia. There will be only 17 new cars for the 34 counties which make up the Columbus district.

Tire Stock Low
Tire stocks are also low and the February quota is down. Recapping is the only way to be sure cars have good treads.

Local dealers point out that it may be years before new cars are obtainable. Many people believed that manufacture of automobiles would be resumed with the end of the war against Germany. That may take months yet and even after it is over there is no assurance plants will revert to automobile manufacture. Present indications are that the total war against Japan will hold up this program for many more months. And even after both Germany and Japan are licked it will be months before cars are again manufactured for it will take some time to convert plants.

Mechanics Busy
Meanwhile mechanics are working night and day to keep cars rolling. Most of the work is being done on cars essential to the war or home front efforts. If Mr. Average Motorist develops some minor difficulty with his car he should try to fix it himself because garages do not have time. One dealer said his men were working long hours every day on war workers' cars, dairy trucks, farm trucks and other vehicles which must keep moving to prevent slowing up of the war effort. He stated his firm was behind on this work and was accepting no business from those not engaged in a vital activity.

The extreme cold and icy roads of this winter have taken many cars off the highways. Some have been ruined in crashes. Others have been ruined by freezing. Garagesmen say that most of this damage has been due to neglect and many car owners are now wishing they had listened to advice to take care of their cars as they vainly hunt for replacements. There are few new cars obtainable here and used car stocks are very low.

HORSEMEN TO HOLD MEETING IN CITY MARCH 8

A dinner meeting for members of the Pickaway Horsemen's association and guests will be held March 8, it was announced Saturday. Several new members have joined the group.

Speakers at the March meeting will be Judge E. E. Rittenour, Piketon, president of the U. S. Trotting Horse association, and Ed Peniston, Chillicothe. Members of the Fayette and Ross county associations will be guests at the meeting.

Mrs. Joan Goldsberry, of Columbus, his wife, was notified Wednesday by the War Department that he had been wounded in action on the January date, but she had received a letter from him in which he stated he had undergone an abdominal operation for the removal of shrapnel and that he was getting along fine at a hospital somewhere in Luxembourg.

ASHVILLE

Ashville's homecoming game with Pickaway Friday evening was a complete success with two interesting games, dancing, and card playing to entertain the many spectators. Ashville's reserves started the festivities off "on the right foot" by winning 35-14.

After the reserve game, the homecoming queen, Virginia Baum, and her attendants, Ada Lou Beckett, Ellen Johnson, Violet McDowell and Carolyn Fudge, made their entrance and were presented by the witty master of ceremonies, Cassanova Puckett, who then introduced the team captains, Russell Gregg and Richard Hudson. Romaine Wilson presented the queen and her attendants with their corsages.

Following the end of an exciting first half of the varsity game with the score tied 21-21 as the result of a 19-point second quarter for Pickaway, the following dads of team members were introduced: Arthur Deal, Herbert Gregg, Lawrence Hoover, Frank Hudson, George Messick, Ansel Pettibone, Harry Speakman, Erville Thomas, Charles Wilson, Dwight Woodworth, Don Courtright, Harold Pettibone, Loy Schiff, Harry Trego, Benford Millar and Edwin Irwin. The Ashville varsity came to life in the third and fourth quarters to outscore Pickaway 25-11 and kill the hopes of the Pickaway fans, who had visions of an upset during the early stages of the game.

Russell Gregg, Richard Hudson,

Richard Messick, Romaine Wilson and Arthur Deal made up the all-senior lineup that started the game. These boys will play their last scheduled game Tuesday at Columbus Linden McKinley, before entering the county tournament. Ashville's cheerleaders added color to the festivities by appearing for the first time in their new uniforms. The gymnasium was decorated in the school colors and sections were reserved for the Pickaway fans and the dads. All in all the evening was one that will not soon be forgotten by those present.
